

Abstract

The present invention provides a process for producing an alumina coating comprised mainly of α crystal structure on a base material.